DURING the current year the enrollment of Students has been greater than at any previous time since the discontinuance of the preparatory department. Every room in the college has been occupied. The opening of the New Gymnasium for Young Men has marked a new era in the college life, and other material improvements are in prospect. New courses have been offered in English and in Modern Languages, and a new professorship in the department of History will next year make possible additional courses in History, Economics, and Social Science.

The Halcyon.

Poetic sea-bird, in whose nesting-time,
'Twas said Peace brooded over shore and sea,
The thankful Greeks, in many an ancient rime,
Have voiced thy message of tranquillity.

We love thy legend: for, with loyal friends,
For us are dawning yet such Halcyon days;
To thee, before the magic season ends,
We make this offering, in grateful praise.

T. A. J.

Out on the tide,
O'er the world so wide,
 We are sending our treasure-store.
Oh, far may it glide,
And joy betide
 To those on the distant shore !

In the care-worn day,
Of the sad world gray,
 May hearts with pleasure thrill ;
And our message gay,
Of work and play
 Wake Swarthmore echoes still !

And in our home
'Neath the College dome,
 Our Halcyon rings to you,
Good will and cheer,
Through all the year,
 From the Class of "Nineteen Two."

ALMA AMELIA HULL.

To the memory of ALMA A. HULL,
Friend and Classmate, do we dedicate this book.

“So didst thou travel on life’s common way
In cheerful godliness.” So didst thou lend
To us thy sweet influence, and didst blend
With earnest striving the more gentle sway
Of kindly love; to aught we did essay
Thou gav’st thy aid; to teacher, classmate, friend,
Thou wert as a sweet song which God did send
To cheer the heart in its oft darkened day.
Within these pages we have striven to tell
The joys and sorrows and whate’er befell,
In these three years of happy history,
This grateful class which thou didst serve so well.
And so, dear friend, in loving memory,
We dedicate our HALCYON to thee.

Swarthmore College.

ITS ORIGIN AND SOME NOTES UPON ITS EARLY HISTORY.

BY EDWARD H. MAGILL, LL. D.

CHAPTER VIII.

INTEENTH YEAR, 1884-85.—On the 10th of Fourth month of this year the College lost, by death, the valuable services of the Superintendent, Thomas S. Foulkes. He had served the College with untiring energy and unremitting care for a period of thirteen years. His interest in its success was unsurpassed, and he never spared himself when his duties seemed to call for his services. His kindly and genial disposition warmed toward him the hearts of all by whom he was surrounded. His ever ready jests and good stories made his office a centre of attraction. Students of that time will recall with pleasure the cordial reception which ever awaited them there. He had a story ever ready and appropriate to illustrate the passing occurrences of the day, and in this respect he was not unlike our martyr President Lincoln. His unselfish devotion to his work may be illustrated by a circumstance not generally known. Forest fires were not uncommon in those earlier days of the College, when "huts" and "caves" of "Preps" were not infrequent on the wooded hillside along the Crum. The origin of these mysterious fires may be readily conjectured. To extinguish these was frequently no inconsiderable task. It was at one of these fires, where, with others, he spent a good part of the night in surrounding and arresting the flames, that he was so exhausted when he retired toward morning that fears were entertained for the result of that night's overwork. This was in very early spring, and he was never really well afterward, and before the middle of the Fourth month that earnest, active life went out, and he passed on to the Life beyond. His memory will ever be most kindly cherished by all Swarthmoreans of that early day. His place was filled by the appointment of William J. Hall, a graduate of the College of the Class of 1878.

Other changes in the heads of departments were made this year as follows: Susan W. Gillam took charge of the Department of Elocution, in place of Joseph W. Teets, resigned; Gerrit E. H. Weaver, A. B., of the Class of '82, took charge of the Department of History and Political Economy, in place of Ellen E. Osgood, resigned; and Beatrice Magill, a graduate of the School of Design in Philadelphia, took charge of the Department of Art, in place of Ellen N. Griscom, resigned. The President of the College again resumed charge of the Department of Latin, in place of Professor Eugène Paulin, who, in addition to his other College duties, had been appointed Superintendent of Instruction and Discipline of the Preparatory School.

The whole number of students this year was 275, about three-fifths of whom were children of members of the Religious Society of Friends, this proportion being larger than in any previous years. The proportion of College students continued to advance, and this year there were 112 in the College classes, and an increasing tendency to pursue one of the regular courses of study provided. To the eight schools from which students were admitted without examination, on certificates from their Principals, the Friends' School, of Locust Valley, L. I., was added the present year.

The Library, which was wholly destroyed by the fire three years before, had now reached 6,247 volumes, being an increase of 547 volumes in the past year. Some suggestions were made this year of providing a new Library building, that the growth of the Library might be facilitated, but I may say, at the time of this writing, about sixteen years later, that no such provision has yet been made. But we have gradually divided our Library, as it has continued to grow, and established Department Libraries in different rooms, and in this way the pressing need for a separate Library building has been, for a time, obviated. But the proper care of the books will eventually require a separate building, and toward supplying this need the attention of Friends must be turned at no distant day.

In the report upon the financial condition of the College the present year, the Board of Managers dwelt upon the necessity of looking forward toward the endowment of some of the Professorships. Upon this important subject they used this language: "While it will be seen that the institution continues to be, as in the past, self-supporting, so far as the regular current expenses are concerned, it must be seen that we cannot make the various improvements needed, and depend for this work upon the current receipts. And in an especial manner is it true that, as our requirements are advanced, and the number in our College classes constantly increased, we shall be under the necessity of incurring greater expense for instruction than in the past. To meet these added expenses it is exceedingly desirable that Friends who have the means should extend aid by the endowment of the Professorships. Friends should understand that, without such aid, no institution for higher education can or should ever expect to be self-supporting. It is therefore earnestly hoped that the friends of the College will look toward the endowment of the principal Professorships in the College at an early day."

SEVENTEENTH YEAR, 1885-86.—The number of College students continuing steadily to increase with the more advanced condition of our Preparatory School, the number in the College classes reached 123 for the present year, and at this time Class C, the lowest in the Preparatory School, was dropped, and the forward movement toward the elimination of that school, and having Swarthmore take her place as a college proper, among the colleges of our State and country, was thus fairly begun. An earnest appeal was made to Friends to so arrange the courses of study in their preparatory schools as to fit students to enter our Freshman class, and remain four years and complete the course, instead of entering too early, improperly prepared, and, becoming discouraged, leaving to enter upon business before the College course was completed. To increase an interest in this subject the President began, during this year, visiting various places in this and adjoining States, and speaking, to Friends and others, of the value and importance of a Modern College Course of Study for all, and especially for all intending to teach, in whatever grade; and one of the results of this outside labor was the organization of the "College Association of Pennsylvania," which has now increased, and become the "Association of Colleges and Preparatory Schools of the Middle States and Maryland." The Managers, who have been, from the first, so deeply impressed by the importance of their work for the present and future generations, say at this time: "In this work we bespeak for him the coöperation and sympathy of friends of the College generally. We believe that it may be made one among the various means by which additional interest in a higher education may be aroused among Friends throughout the country; and that thus, in a few years, instead of one college among us, not quite half filled with college students, and eking out its numbers by a large preparatory school, the demand for places for Friends' children, properly prepared at home, may be so great that the College classes alone will fill Swarthmore to its utmost capacity, and soon require additional buildings for their accommodation."

The only change in the head of a department the present year was the appointment of Henry W. Rolfe, A. M., a graduate of Amherst College, previously an Instructor in Cornell University, to take charge of the Department of Latin. The President, who had assumed this charge the previous year, now instructed only the Senior Class, requiring this relief that he might give more attention to outside lectures, and the general duties of the College. As an Assistant in Latin, Ferris W. Price, A. B., a graduate of Swarthmore in the Class of 1874, and for some years a successful Instructor in Friends' Central School, in Philadelphia, was appointed in place of Mary L. Austin, who resigned at this time after fifteen years of most satisfactory and faithful service in the College. The Department of Chemistry was much strengthened at this time by the appointment of Albert G. Palmer, Ph. D., of Johns Hopkins University, as Assistant Professor of Chemistry, and considerable new apparatus was added to this Department. A change, which was practically, though not nominally, a change of the head of a Department, was made this year: Dr. Joseph Leidy, who was appointed Professor of Natural History in 1870, and served the College so well in that capacity for fifteen years, was now made Emeritus Professor of Natural History and Curator of the Museum; and Dr. Charles Dolley was appointed Assistant Professor of Natural History and Lecturer on Physiology and Hygiene. Dr. Dolley had recently returned from abroad, where he had been pursuing his studies in Zorn's Biological Laboratory, in Naples. He entered most zealously upon his new duties, and the work of this Department was greatly extended, Dr. Dolley giving us three entire days each week, whereas Dr. Leidy had given us but a few hours weekly of his valuable time. Under Dr. Dolley the College opened a Biological Laboratory for practical work, and made Biology an elective study for all who desired and were prepared to enter upon it. Among the minor changes made by Dr. Dolley is one which the young women of the College have since especially enjoyed, the establishment of the flower-garden on the border of the drive, at the east end of the College. We felt that the changes and additions in the corps of Instructors this year were eminently satisfactory, and that the teaching force had never hitherto been so strong and efficient as at that time.

The Instruction Committee appointed, this year, a part of their number as a Visiting Committee, who visited and reported upon the classes every month, and the President made to this Committee monthly reports of his visits to the Classes, and their condition, both in the College and Preparatory School.

Another important change was made at this time: Class C, which had been used as a Model School in the Teachers' Department, being now dropped, it was decided to abandon this school of practice, and to open a course in the Science of Teaching, for those intending to become teachers, and the Professor to be appointed was to use the class itself as the practice or model class, thus obviating the necessity of a school of small children for this purpose. Thus, the College proper was, little by little, being evolved from the large mixed College and Preparatory School.

About 1,200 volumes were added to the Library this year, for more than half of which we were indebted to gifts of our friends, Stephen Darlington, W. J. Youmans, Joseph M. Truman, Jr., Dillwyn Parrish, and Joseph C. Turnpenny; and Friends' Historical Library was considerably increased by gifts from Howard M. Jenkins, Charles Thompson, Dillwyn Parrish, Eli M. Lamb, Lydia H. Hall, and Lydia Jackson.

Increased attention was given this year to the Department of Physical Culture, and Walter W. Ford, M. D., was appointed to train the students in accordance with the carefully graded system of Dr. Sargent, of Harvard College; and Susan P. Stackhouse, M. D., was appointed Lecturer on Physiology and Hygiene to the young women, and Dr. Dolley gave a similar course to the young men.

At this time the report of the students' standing in scholarship in exact figures, indicating the percentages, was abandoned, and the present system of first, second, third, and fourth grades was established.

A full report of this prolific year would lead me quite beyond the limits prescribed by the HALCYON, and I must close with this remark, again repeated by the Managers at this time. They say: "Let us again remind you that the one great need of the College, to place it beyond all question upon a safe and secure foundation, is the endowment of Professors' chairs, in all of the leading and essential departments." The next chapter will show that this reiterated counsel did not go very long unheeded.

Resolutions of the Class of 1902 on the Death of Joseph Bilderback.

PURE and spotless and of a clean heart, warmed by love and sympathy for others, he helped us all toward a higher and better life. He left us to prepare himself by the study of medicine for a higher plane of helpfulness and service, dying as he had lived, fearlessly and calmly. Be it, therefore,

Resolved, On behalf of our Class, that the loss of our classmate causes us the deepest regret and sorrow, mitigated only by the memory of the gentle life he lived among us and the sure belief that he has "outsoared the shadow of our night." And be it

Resolved, That the Class express to his family our sorrow and sympathy. And be it further

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be sent to his family and printed in the College publications.

The Joseph Leidy Scientific Society.

THE Scientific Society was organized in March, 1895, and later received the name of The Joseph Leidy Scientific Society, of Swarthmore College. Its object is to keep abreast with the discoveries in the scientific world. There are five sciences included in the work of the Association: Astronomy, Biology and Physiography, Chemistry, Engineering, and Physics. The programs of the meetings consist of a report from the instructors in each of the above departments concerning the recent discoveries in the respective sciences. Papers are then read by different members on topics of scientific interest, followed by an open discussion by the Society. The interesting character of these programs is shown by the full attendance at the meetings, from both the College and the borough. The Executive Committee consists of a committee of three from each department,—one instructor and two students.

The residents of the borough of Swarthmore are eligible to membership, as well as the students and officers of the College. The meetings are held in Science Hall, on the first Third-day evening of each month during the College year.

The Young Friends' Association.

HIS Association is intended primarily for students, instructors, and other members of our College community; but a considerable number of the neighbors are members, and are identified with its work.

The objects of the organization are two-fold: First, the study of the history, literature, and principles of the Society of Friends, and second, the consideration of the vital questions of religion and spirituality which we meet in our everyday life.

The regular meetings are held in the College parlor, on the evening of the third First-day of every month during the College year.

LITERARY MISCELLANY

Sally Wright

Prologue.

To him who, for the love of College, holds
Communion with our HALCYON, it speaks
A various language: for his gayer hours
It has a jesting humor, harmless fun
And wittiness absurd,—yet doth it seem Unto his deeper musings as a true
And loving picture, that recalls to him
His days of youth ere he's aware. When thoughts
Of those once happy days come like a flood
Over thy spirit, and when memories fond
Of the gray walls, the campus, and the hall,
And dear companions, ne'er to be forgotten,
Make thee to ponder and grow sad at heart,—
Oh, then consider these few leaves, and love
Our HALCYON!

Transformed.

THE golden splendor flees across the skies,
 Before the storm's fierce, threatening outposts driven;
On western hills the daylight faints and dies,
 And all the air with shafts of fire is riven.
Changed seems the world: the youth who hurries on
 With eager heart and light, to understand
Life's secrets, sees relentless Sorrow, wan,
 Holding the cup of trembling in her hand;
Yet not a moment falters, face to face
 He drains her bitter draught without a cry;
Lo! his the victory, for from that place
 A Hero goes, a Man who can defy
 Earth's tumult and its strife, within his eyes
 The glory and the strength of sacrifice.

A Cat's Tale.

[TOLD BY THE CAT.]

My family, I must confess,
Were ordinary cats;
They had no false pretensions
And were not aristocrats.

But I was fond of social life,
And one day I was caught,
And with many gay companions
To the College I was brought.

By the wicked use of chloroform
They made me feel quite dead,
And, plunged in horrid alcohol,
Put a weight upon my head.

But of the weight which holds me down
I murmur not a word,
For, as it keeps my spirits up,
Complaint would be absurd.

And then when Dr. Trotter
And the Juniors all come in,
I'm brought out for their inspection
And my troubles then begin.

They cut me and they slash me,
And they turn me o'er and o'er,
And they sputter out all sorts of names
I never heard before.

At bones and veins and arteries
Each one must have a look;
And they say enough about my nerves
To fill a large-sized book.

My cranium is a wonder,
And you'd find it quite in vain
To remember all the parts that go
To form my massive brain!

And since I'm so important
And absorbing, and all that,
There's a volume all about my charms:
It's simply called, "The Cat."

So, with honors heaped upon me,
And grown quite aristocratic—
I scorn the day I lived on rats
Or caught mice in an attic!

To the President of the Class of 1902.

The Class of 1901, at a meeting held to-day, have resolved that unless their constitution be returned by Monday January the fourteenth they will refuse to support the 1902
Halegon. Elizabeth Savethmore
Sec. Class of 1901.

NINETEEN-ONE SENIOR DIGNITY.

Senior Dignity.

Four long years of College training,
Four long years of work and play,
Four long years of upward striving,
Toiling on life's hard pathway.

Now at last are won the laurels,
Won the honor and respect;
Won the dignity and sweetness
Which from such we must expect.

Under-classmen gaze with longing
While they talk on problems deep,
While they settle knotty questions,
And their quiet pathways keep.

Leading all to kindly thinking,
Leading to a better life,
Leading, by their gentle precept,
Far from quarrel and from strife.

Blessings on the Senior standing!
Next year we assume that place,
Hoping that we may prove worthy
Of that dignity and grace.

Ein Jungling Falling Downing.

Es giebt a puer upon this mundus
Who had a corpus sehr profundus.
To play at foot-ball puer amabat,
And at lacrosse so schön pugnabat—
Dass all who saw the bona teama
Erklärte ihn a "whooping screamer."
He had a gait quite elegantus
And ran wie eine elephantus;
But ach! he was zu gross a homo
To fit an ordinary domo,
Et while in Economics sitzen
Der gute Stuhl fang an zu splitzen!
Profundus uproar puerorum.
Affrighted girls run outum doorum.
The crash of falling homo bonus
Shakes campus, portico, et domus—
And Prex sans chapeau soon occurrit
To see and hear the reason for it,
And puer in this saddum plightum,

Waves arms and legs ad infinitum.
Propterea the fuss he machen
Es war unmöglich nicht zu lachen.
Præceptor Hull and die Studenti
Forgot sein bücher and laughed a plenty.
At last, from out this devastation,
The lad arose without elation,
But with a schöne smile he dixit
That with a hammer he could fix it.
But fracus magnus was not ended,
For ere der Stuhl could be amended
He tried the strongest alliorum
And soon was flatum on the floorum.
And now, alas! he's smashed so many
That alle Kinder have not any—
The Faculty, with great dejection,
Sit tailor-fashion in Collection—
And Social Hour is quite forlornum
Since chairs and "pets" are allem gonum.

Frozen Love.

A MELLOW-DRAMA IN TWO ACTS.

Dramatis Personæ.

CUPID—A sweet young thing—a Senior—whose heart is hovering between Marie and Alix.

TOM SMITH—An unknown villain, who travels under the alias of "Smithie." Mad about Marie.

BILL—His accomplice—dark and deep.

MARIE—From "Paree"—a love-lorn brunette.

ALIX—A love-lorn blonde.

ACT I.

[SCENE—In the boys' gymnasium; the masked Hal-lowe'en ball is at its height. Cupid, disguised, is observed hovering near the ice-cream freezers.]

CUPID.—Ah! now's the time. If once the noise increases

And rises to a deafening height, 'tis then
With clattering plate and spoon I'll easy take,
With lightning speed, four bricks from out the freezer;

And then, when close attention is quite drawn
To funny antics of the German gang,
I'll haste me out to sigh to sweet Marie
And witty Alix, and with frozen sweets
Will tempt their palates and in sweetest tones
Will tell them of the state my heart is in,
And beg to be their slave forevermore.

THE VILLAIN (observing Cupid in meditation)—
What mischief plots he now, I'd like to know?
What mushy plan to gain the fickle love
Of sweet Marie, the belle of the North Wing?
He's tried at Social Hour, at meal, at dance,
By sending flowers, and feasts, and sundry things;
And yet I've foiled him in the vain attempt
To gain one smile the more from sweet Marie.
Yet what new wrinkle plans the love-sick lad?
I'll take my guard, and keep my eagle eye
Fixed on his motions. Bill, my keen-eyed friend,
Art fond of an adventure and of spoils?
Then aid me in the foiling of this fool,
And follow me wherever he doth lead.

[Curtain.]

ACT II.

[SCENE—Plateau beneath the window of Marie and Alix on the North Wing. A crescent moon hangs over the trees in the west, casting a pale light on Cupid as he steals from the gymnasium, soon followed by Smithie and Bill.]

SMITHIE (in ghostly whisper)—

'Tis now I see his sweet concocted plan
To send the maidens dainties extra sweet,
And frozen into bricklets, nice and square.
But 'neath the maidens' boudoir there's a room
Now dark and drear—a fitting, spooky place,
From which to see and hear his cunning plans.
Quick, quick, good Bill, and hither will we hie
To aid him in his way of making love!

[Exeunt Smithie and Bill.]

CUPID (advancing slowly under the window, whistles an air from an opera)—

[Two heads appear at the window.]

MARIE—Ah, 'tis the signal! Sing, O Alix, sing
To let him know that we indeed are here!

[They sing, "Love, love, love, dreaming of love so true. Happy heart—"]

ALIX (interrupting)—See, Marie, see,

What's on the plate he bears within his hand?
Indeed, I scent the odor of a dish
Of ice cream and of dainty little cakes;

How good they look! Methinks I love him more Than ever I have loved a lad before.

CUPID (sighing like a furnace)—

Fair maidens, e'er my full heart breaks in twain
For keeping to myself my deep affection,
Accept from me this paltry little gift
Of frozen dainties and of cookies sweet;
And know that in each brick of frozen cream
Is well congealed my ardent love for you;
And as each spoonful melts upon your lips,
May it be a sweet and tender billet-doux.

MARIE—Ah, Alix, listen to his ardent pleading,
While I search for a basket and a string
To send down to the youth, lest, to our sorrow,
The ice cream melts e'er he is thro' his rhyming,
And we have had no taste, for e'en in moonlight,
My heart yearns more for ice cream than his verses.

[The basket slowly descends, and while Cupid tenderly places therein each brick, a sepulchral voice is heard:]

Now, William, my true friend, now is our chance
To turn his well-laid plans to smithereens.

MARIE (starting)—Ah, Alix, did there strike upon thine ear

A voice then, most familiar in its sound?

ALIX—Nonsense, Marie; pull carefully at the string,
Or back the basket tumbles to the earth.
Here, let me aid thee. Look, Marie! what's that

Which sudden shoots from out the window there
And grabs our basket in a grasp of iron?
Pull with thy strength! In vain! in vain!
Methinks
I saw the coat-sleeve on the villain's arm!
Ah—h—h— [Marie faints.]

ALIX (screaming)—Ah, dear youth, flee
Lest the base villains scramble after thee!
[Alix faints.]

BILL (dark and deep, from the window)—
Ha! ha! you lady fussier!

[Quick curtain.]

From a West Window.

THE cedars through the snowing
Like white-robed friars stand;
The North Wind still is blowing
His white dust o'er the land.

The world is cowed and cloaken
With a garment smooth as silk,
All untarnished, all unbroken,
Save where Alvin came for milk.

Intercessional.

QUEEN of the upper Orient,
Maid of the far-flung butter-plate,
Beneath whose awful aim we shrink
When we come out for water, late.
Oh, one above us, spare us yet!
Can't you forget? Can't you forget?

'Thou seem'st immutable as Time,
As stern and merciless as Fate;
As soon as we begin to pump
Thou hurlest down the butter-plate.
Relent, O Queen, and spare us yet!
Can't you forget? Can't you forget?

At night, when Nature drops to sleep,
We thirst, and know not where to go.
We know thou wait'st above the well,
We know the power of thy blow;
Our parchèd throats we dare not wet;
Can't you forget? Can't you forget?

"I'll scold thee hard, my little man,
I'll trounce thee if thee dozes;
Go, learn thy Conies if thee can,
But if thee can't—" Oh, Moses!

GLOSS, OR ARGUMENT.

The Prologue starteth
the poor lad out; seeth him to the shop; where it showeth him a note.
Thus commenceth the tale. Thermometer, 5° in

He tumbleth from the roof

He findeth he is up against it

PROLOGUE.

THE night was dark and gloomy,
And the wind was shrewd and shrill,
As the trembling pilgrim hastened
To the old shop on the hill.

Now he wins the ancient building,
Now he wins the eaves-trough's rim,
And he sees beneath a pebble
A screed awaiting him.

I

O, go you soft, my pilgrim man,
With that, your precious load!
He slips from off the giddy perch
And rolls into the road.

II

Eke quickly then he oped the note,
With dismal thoughts and sore;
Eke quickly then he cast his eye
And read its horrid lore.

III

The note telleth him to go many miles

"O pilgrim chill, go down the road,
Hustle, with time no loss,
And ere you come to Clifton Heights,
An old tree, with a Cross

IV

Telleth him to rubber behind a scrub oak

"Cut in its side, you there shall view;
Now stop and look behind
The ancient oak, and straitly take
Each thing that you may find.

V

Here the patriarch Balaam, the writer of the note, josheth with him

"And if the day begin to break,
Or, haply, night do fall,
Just dodge the flying pieces, son."
Signed, "Balaam." That was all.

VI

He meeteth a hot dog

He trudgèd on and runnèd on
A-past old Morton drear;
The frost snapped through the livelong night,
A dog snapped off his ear.

VII

He findeth the oak.
Glee

At last he spies the welcome cross,
The which he hails with glee;
Behind he finds a horse-shoe old
Fast nailèd to the tree.

VIII

He findeth that he must go on

He pried it up and read the note
That 'hind it snugly lay.
It said, "Now you have found this prize,—
This further charge obey:

IX

There are others

"At the old shrines below set down
You'll find of shoes just three;
When you have found these relics old,
Hump homeward hastily.

X

He findeth that there is a pair of Jacks

"Add unto them the shoe you have;
They're from my famous Ass;
I took the iron from off his feet
And told him, 'Go to grass!'

XI

Speaketh of the un-godly tribes

"The Evil Ones then hid the shoes,
But you have broke the spell,
And while you haste back to your bed,
They'll hustle back to—Media."

XII

Getteth the sneezes

The pilgrim walkèd north and south
Until the night grew old;
He got the holy relics and—
A very heavy cold.

XIII

Our poet here describeth most aptly the crimson tint of the morning sky

But 'twas five-thirty, and the sun
Had smashed the morning's face;
His nose bled, and the sanguine hue
Was spread all o'er the place.

XIV

He seeth to what a true brotherhood he is called

The pilgrim on his homeward way
Said, as the dogs 'gan howl:
"It is a privilege to be A Monk of the Black Cowl."

[FINIS.]

Ode (owed) to Nineteen-One.

O NAUGHTY one, we've heard it said
You do not use much care
In guarding your own property,
But leave it anywhere.

At constitutions, you must know,
It's sometimes well to look,
And classes are supposed to have
A well-kept minute-book.

A substitute, perhaps, you'll find
Without too much expense,
But when it comes we hope you'll use
A little common sense.

That Will Never Be!

WHEN breakfast comes at half-past eight,
With students all on time;
When Mrs. Bond is sometimes late,
And thinks it is no crime;
When Mrs. S. is smiling bright
At pranks that she may see;
When Supe can make the bells ring right,—
But that will never be!

When Dr. Hull will learn to say
One sentence in an hour;
When Hoadley learns to write a lay
Without curve-paper's power;
When "Appsie" in Collection Hall
Holds bachelor reverie;
When Esther Moore comes back next fall,—
But that will never be!

When Jenks is not a chronic Fresh.,
When "Stock" acquires some grace;
And Teddy does as he is bid
When told to rest his face;
When Jenkins learns that he has less
Of rare ability;
When Milton stops his Lipp-iness,—
But that will never be!

When Alice A. will speak to us
As we go smiling by;
When dreamy Hayes will learn to cuss,
Or know the reason why;
When Battin says that "It was I"
Instead of saying "we,"
And gives a grade that's passing high,—
But that will never be!

When "Pud" shall cease to be a swell,
And "Beshie" is not late;
When Johnson hears the rising bell,
And "Lambie" finds her mate;
When Ida is not always (W)right,
And Edson skates with three;
When Peters is not called a sloth,—
But that will never be!

When Winifred will kindly leave
One honor for the rest;
When Lulu's puns, her friends believe,
Have wholesome wit and jest;
When "Caddy" C. stops preaching
And giving bounteously;
When Betty stops her screeching,—
But that will never be!

And when the Glee Club learns to sing,
And not get off the key;
When to Collection we can bring
Our bashful Faculty;
And when the "cases" do not use
The Alcove's privacy,
And cease Miss Nowell to amuse,—
But that will never be!

When 1901 acquires some sense,
And even smaller knowledge;
And graduates with no pretense
From our time-honored College;
When chunks of green at last roll off
Of verdant 1903;
The frogs will get the whooping-cough,—
But that will never be!

Farce.

Actors: The rival Classes of 1901 and 1902.

[PRESENTED IN THE COLLEGE OF SWARTHMORE IN
THE YEAR 1901.]

ACT I.

[SCENE I.—Students' room, December 18th, 1900.]

DELEGATE OF 1901 (speaks to Secretary of Class of 1902)—Ye ladies of the class below,
I've come to learn whate'er you know
Concerning our lamented book
Which from the hallway you once took.
The time for jokes has long gone by,—
As upper classmen we must try
To put all petty strifes away;
"Peace" be our motto, day by day.
In no official way I ask,
But as a friend I do this task.

SECRETARY OF 1902—

You ask me if I'll get for you
Your minute-book from 1902,—
If we are willing to restore
The treasured book to you once more?

Well, since in friendly terms you speak,
The gay West Wingers I will seek
And ask if any will refuse
To get the book you want to use.

ACT II.

[SCENE I.—January 10th. Room I. President and Delegate of 1901 present 1902's action.]

DELEGATE—Dear classmates, we are gathered here
To learn of that which we hold dear.
Not very many weeks ago,
To several Juniors I did go,
And told them (in official guise)
We wished the book they held as prize.
They promised me it should be done
And soon returned to 1901.
We know no action has been taken,
So let us all their fears awaken,
Refusing HALCYONS to buy.
When this they hear they will comply.

[SCENE II.—12.45 P. M. Delegate from 1901 addresses 1903 class meeting.]

DELEGATE—The famous class of 1901
Has promised 1902's book to shun;

And since we are your allies true,
We simply say, "It's up to you."
With our decision now you'll side
And stick to us whate'er betide.
THE HALCYON you must not take;
Of course, you'll do this for our sake.

ACT III.

[SCENE I.—Day after. Junior Class meeting.]

PRESIDENT—I've asked you to assemble here
To hearken to a letter queer,—
The Senior Class has deemed it best
To send a threat and no request.

[Secretary reads 1901's refusal to buy HALCYONS. Shouts of laughter arise.]

PRESIDENT—Of course, each one will understand
Just what is meant by this demand.
No former note has been received,
And their own class has been deceived;
And all, I'm sure, will but agree
From every blame our class is free.
The answer, then, I leave to you;
Consider well what we must do.

[Delegate from 1904 enters.]

DELEGATE—My allies true, I have been sent
To tell you Naughty-four's intent.
We pledge ourselves, if loss ensue,

To buy not one, but even two.
So, if need be, we you implore
Just call on us, young Naughty-four.

[Much applause.]

MEMBER OF 1902—

Mr. President, since first you spoke
This thing has seemed a monstrous joke.
I cannot see what they will gain;
'Tis true the threat has been in vain.
'The answer, then, is simply "No,"
Our strong position this will show.

ACT IV.

[SCENE I.—January 14th. Senior Class meeting.
1902's reply read.]

PRESIDENT—Our standing now is known to all;
Perhaps it would be best to "crawl,"
And smooth this o'er as best we can,
For all is changed since we began.
They now have got the upper hand,—
THE HALCYON they do command.
So let us one and all unite
To put this matter out of sight.

[Exit.]

ENVOI.

Ah! Seniors, learn, when on a quest,
The latest laughter is the best;
"That he who fights, then runs away,
Will live to fight another day."

The Parcels in the Hall.

A FRESHMAN went to luncheon at a monstrous rapid pace,
If there'd been another of him you'd have called the stunt a race;
But the doors closed tight upon him, he had to sign,
and all—
Because he stopped to look at the parcels in the Hall.

A Soph'more came in late to "Trig." with worn and worried look,
He got a zero in his work and a "below zero" look;
For the Prof. indeed was angry, and the trouble happened all—
Because he stopped to look at the parcels in the Hall.

A Junior at dinner told a "Fresh." she should not budge
Until she'd sworn to meet him in the alcove with some fudge;
The Freshman kept her promise, but he missed his treat—and all—
Because he stopped to look at the parcels in the Hall.

A grave, unhurried Senior who carried hat and cane,
Had quite decided that he'd take the 7.11 train;
But the train went in and left him,—he was very mad—and all—
Because he stopped to look at the parcels in the Hall.

Now, harken, good St. Peter, to the teaching of my rime,
If you hope to get the Swarthmore folk to Heaven
in good time;
And I warn you, Angel Gabriel, e'er you give the final call,
Please remove all paper parcels from the corners of your hall!

All-Night Gas.

AN old girl came back to visit and to roam the College o'er,—

Said she to me, quite earnestly, when she had seen each floor:

"There's a difference in the College—how has it come to pass?"

And I answered very proudly, "We now have all-
night gas."

"When I was here," she reminisced, "straight at th'
eleventh hour,

Old William bold, as he was told, turned off the luminous power;

'Twas our sad way to flunk next day,—do you ever flunk in class?"

And I answered very proudly, "We now have all-
night gas."

"And the maidens in the morning, when the bells rang their alarms,

In spite of 'Kids' and curling tongs, left off their curly charms;

Yet now each one has wavy hair,—how manages each lass?"

I answered with a knowing wink, "We now have
all-night gas."

"When our feasts were at their highest and the fudge
was nearly done,

The light went out, the fudge was spoiled, as also was our fun.

Then we screamed and laughed and scrambled,— how those happy days did pass!"

And I murmured rather sadly, "We now have all-night-gas."

Lament.

EXAMS are done, and vacation
Comes to the student's mind,
Like balm on a wearied spirit
When cares are left behind.

Yet a feeling of sadness comes o'er me
That is almost akin to pain,
As I silently take my paper
And learn that I've flunked again.

With Apologies to Adelaide Anne Proctor.

SEATED one night at my studies,
I was weary and ill at ease,
And my thoughts were wandering idly
Over the fathomless seas.

I know not where I was roaming
On the waves with their white-crested foam,
Till soft o'er the lonely campus
Came the words of "Home, Sweet Home."

They flooded my moonlit chamber
As if they had come to command;
They lay on my troubled spirit
Like the touch of mother's hand.

They quieted all my longing
For the home that was far away;
They seemed as guardian angels
That would watch me day by day.

They brightened my barren surroundings,
Casting a loving light,
Then trembled away into silence,
Into the depths of the night.

I have sought, but I seek all vainly
Those moments to restore,
That came with infinite blessing
To a heart that was weary and sore.

Perhaps it was the moonlight,
Or the lands where I wanted to roam,—
It may be that only my longing
Made me love that "Home, Sweet Home."

To Our Fools.

Oh, you who take my good Pears' soap and write upon my glass,
Mayhap you deem yourself a wit, but I think you an ass.
You may think that you do it when there's not a soul about,
But the Fool-Killer'll git you

ef
you don't watch
out!

Oh, you who whistle loudly when the 'Varsity's asleep,
Who love to hear them wake and utter curses loud
and deep,
You may run where'er you want to, you may cringe
and spy and scout,
But the Fool-Killer'll git you

ef
you don't watch
out!

And you who do these crazy stunts around the College here,
You'd better go and hide your heads, and shrink in trembling fear,
You may think he isn't watching, but he's coming,
don't you doubt,
And the Fool-Killer'll git you

ef
you don't watch
out!

When we all came back to College in the Fall.

It's a saying, old and trite,
That time causes in its flight
Many unexpected changes great and small;
But we never really thought
Of what wonders it had wrought
Till we all came back to College in the fall.

When we entered the front door,
As we'd often done before,
The place looked hardly natural at all;
For 'twas filled with palm trees green,
And the "pets" could not be seen,
When we all came back to College in the fall.

Still, on signing all intent,
Each to Prex's office went,
Across the fine new carpet in the hall;
But Miss Moore had abdicated,
And her post long had vacated,
Ere we all came back to College in the fall.

Truly, we were heavy-hearted,
Learning that she had departed,
She and others who were gone beyond recall;
But we soon found newer faces
That could fill the vacant places,
When we all came back to College in the fall.

Yes, there're changes, certainly,
But I know you'll all agree
That it's still the same old College with them all;
And whate'er we felt before,
That each year we love it more,
As we all come back to College in the fall.

Naughty-Twos(ing).

OH! we Naughty-twos are a merry crowd,
We never miss a lark,
And among our talents it's always allowed
That twosing deserves remark.
How the Student Government we appal,
How our marks we are constantly losing,
By wasting the moments in alcove and hall
On that naughty game of twosing!

Now, here's to the cases our numbers enroll,
The faithful and fickle ones, both!
All our toils and our vigils they sweetly console,
While we struggle for wisdom's growth.
For, so brilliant we are and such wonders we do,
Our brains need some amusing,
So here's to our dear old Naughty-Two,
And here's to our Naughty Twosing!

There happened once
A tête-à-tête
In the Phanir room,—
Sad to relate!
The Dean came by:
'Twas Jerry's fate;
Her wrath he must
Ameli(a)rate.

Billy Walker's Sentiments on Chivalry.

"CHIVALROUS days are gone by,"
Argued a lively young girl,
"The men nowadays have forgotten those things
Which once put our hearts in a whirl.

"Let's suppose that you went for a walk
With a girl that you greatly admired,
And you came to a street all covered with mud,
And every carriage was hired—

"Would you lay down your cloak, as Sir Walter did,
And think it a trifling loss?"
"Ah, no," said the youth, "a much better way,— I'd carry the lady across."

Oh! Fudge!

WHAT's that a-ringin' down the hall, and singin'
through my head,
A-makin' such an awful fuss, when white folks are abed?
Hark! 'tis a street piano, or a circus, I should judge.
No! it's only Doctor Cummings and his bugle-call
—"Oh! Fudge!"

Apologies to Father Goose.

WHY do the Freshmen flunk? you ask,
Why do the Freshmen flunk?

The reason why is plain to see—
Because they have Geometry,
They cannot help but flunk.

Why do the Soph'mores flunk? you ask,
Why do the Soph'mores flunk?

The reason why—pray, keep it mum—
The Soph'mores are so very dumb,
They cannot help but flunk.

Why don't the Juniors flunk? you ask,
Why don't the Juniors flunk?

The reason cannot be complex,
They have a splendid pull with Prex.
And so they never flunk.

Why do the Seniors flunk? you ask,
Why do the Seniors flunk?

The reason short is known to all,—
Pride often goes before a fall,
And so they always flunk.

Holding the Stakes.

A NINETEEN-ONE and a Nineteen-two
Were wrangling as of yore,
And as they debated each argument new,
A maid of Nineteen-four Looked on with wonder and reverence
At the play of wit and superior sense.

Now I blush this monstrosity to confess,
But these upper-classmen bet
(For truth will out—I can do no less)
Six sodas to six—they were set
For neither was willing an inch to recede,
So they turned to the Freshman to witness the deed.

The Senior gently and winningly said,
“Won’t you act as referee?”
Demurely the little one hung her head,
She blushed. “Sir, I will be,”—
Murmured in voice that timidly shakes,—
“If, you’ll only let me hold the stakes.”

The morning breaks,
“Doc” blows his horn,
We sleepers wake
To hear with scorn,
“Hello! Johnson!”

The Scrub.

Who is it that’s working in sunshine or rain,
With never a thought of applause or of gain?
Who offers all gladly—time, muscle, and brain?
Who is it?

—The Scrub.

Who thinks first of College and never of self?
Who gets the hard knocks and gets laid on the shelf,
While he plays his last ounce, as a gambler his pelf?
Who is it?

—The Scrub.

And who, when the team plays the year’s biggest game,
Stands ready to sub without envy or shame?
For deep in his heart is one thought—Swarthmore’s fame:
Who is it?

—Three cheers for the Scrub!

From Swarthmore’s Omar.

A BOOK of Conics underneath the bed,
A small Welsh rabbit and a crust of bread,
And one to help me in my studying.
Ah! studying is Paradise, ’tis said!

Consolation.

Oh, sad is the lot of the poor little Fresh,
Home-sick and lonely and blue;
Far, far away from his loving mama,
And those terrible lessons to do!
The Sophs lie in wait for him all 'round the hall,
And he feels that life's hardly worth living at all.

Yet bitter's the fate of those same awful Sophs,
For their duty it is as they know,
To look after the Freshmen with diligent zeal,
And teach them the way they should go;
So they're weighed down with trouble and sorrow
and care,
And think that their burden's too heavy to bear.

But hard is the life of the tall, stately Juniors,— Steady, continuous work;
For their HALCYON has to be out in the spring,
But won't if their duty they shirk;
So their brains they must rack by night and by day,
Till they cultivate wrinkles and early turn gray.

Alas! for the Seniors, what pen can relate
Their terrible story of woe?
With Commencement orations and theses to write,
Surely very great sorrow they know!
And then Shakespeare Evening has troubles beside,
So the poor, weary things almost wish they had died.

Yes, truly, we're in a deplorable state,
And sad is the life that we lead,
For we're hustled and hurried from morning till night
In a heart-rending manner indeed;
Yet there're gains for our losses and balms for our pains,
And just let us bear it in mind,
And be glad that in good skating weather a large
Crum(b) of comfort we easily find.

The Question.

O SHADES of the departed
That haunt these College halls;
O young and hopeful spirits
That left its sheltering walls;
O knights of youth and valor,
O maidens brave and true,
Come, tell us of the future
And what it held for you!

Fulfillment of the promise
That the hope of youth imparts,—
The image of the future
That is printed in our hearts,—
The age of truth and wisdom
That we fondly hope to see,—
Will they always be as distant
As they now appear to be?

The Answer.

THROUGH broken hopes that vanish
The goal seems far away,
And to-morrow's sun is darkened
By the shadows of to-day;
The steps of human progress
Seem but slow to anxious youth;
But the growth is sure and steady,
On to Beauty and to Truth!

Fulfillment of the promise,
The hope and image fair,
The purest aspirations
The heart has cherished there,
Have their answer in the future,
And ye faithful ones shall see
All of good you ever longed for,
Ever willed or hoped to be!

The Rape of the Lock.

(REVISED EDITION.)

CANTO I.

WHAT dire offence from am'rous causes springs,
What mighty contests rise from trivial things,
I sing. The sad occasion was in May,
When came the moon and quite eclipsed the day.
Out came, with smoky glass to see the view
Of such a rare event, so strange and new,
The Student Body, eager, every one,
To see the little moon obscure the sun.

CANTO II.

Not with more glories in the 'therial plain
The sun first rises o'er the purple main,
Than comes Clorinda with her hazy glass,
And dances lightly o'er the jeweled grass.
Fair nymphs and well-dressed youths around her shone,
But every eye was fixed on her alone.
Her lively looks a sprightly mind disclose,
Quick as her eyes, and as unfixed as those.
Favors to none, to all she smiles extends;
Oft she rejects, but never once offends.
Yet graceful ease and sweetness, void of pride,
Might hide her faults, if belles had faults to hide.

CANTO III.

This nymph, to the distraction of mankind,
Had graceful locks which fell before, behind,
And as the moon slips down before the sun,
They reached her ears—eclipsed them every one!

CANTO IV.

And with his apparatus well prepared,
Came Robert, and these observations shared—
And Milton, too, resolved to go to class
Informed upon the wonders of the (g)lass!

CANTO V.

These youths upon the wonder not intent,
Their gaze upon Clorinda soon they bent;
An understanding flashed between their eyes,
For now they saw the means to gain a prize.
But one swift hand 'twould take to do the job—
The execution was assigned to Bob.

CANTO VI.

So while Clorinda raised her lovely eyes
Intent on gazing at the darkening skies,
Our Robert singled out a crooked hair
And severed it from its companions fair.

CANTO VII.

Alas! then did the nymph the parting feel,
And turning quickly on her little heel,
She flashed such glances from her angry eyes
That lengthy Robert shrank to half his size!
And Milton, being of a lesser height,
Was promptly shriveled nearly out of sight!

CANTO VIII.

But these Clorinda could not long subdue,
And when their courage rose their stature grew.
With energy and anger close allied
The maid declared she would be satisfied.

CANTO IX.

And when again her angry passion rose
She wiped her glass across his handsome nose!
And then when Milton tried to intervene
A blacker nose upon his face was seen!

CANTO X.

Ah, me! What dire confusion then arose!
Repaired each culprit to repair his nose.

The maiden left alone to view the sun
Began to mourn this hasty action done.
" 'Twas meet," she said, "they had their noses smeared,
But what if neither one again appeared?"
This awful thought engendered other fears,
And soon the maiden was reduced to tears;
And while the darkness did the campus cover
Down, down, she sank! Life's tragedy was over!

To Johnnie.

To thee, kind friend of our long College life,
Mute teacher who will never be forgot—
To thee, who sharest in all our fun and strife,
And helpst lighten every student's lot;
Who with the single talent God has given
(The art of being true in little things)
Hast humbly climbed the rugged hill to Heaven,
And waitest till the summoning angel brings
The tidings from the Father, when thee'll go
And lay thy treasure at the Judge's feet,
And stand in garments pure and white as snow,
Upon the right hand of the Judgment seat,—
To thee we humbly bow in reverence still
For teaching us to do our Father's will.

Freshman Wit.

THE daintiest little maiden
That ever you did spy
Has come to Swarthmore College
With aspirations high.

She captures many brave young hearts
And wounds them with her dart;
This coquettish Freshman lady
Knows well her happy art.

One evening Jack invited her
To Social Hour with him,
“Why, certainly; I’d love to go.”
(He looked so neat and trim.)

To all Jack’s seeming bright remarks
She answered with a smile,
Till soon he caught her rapt in thought—
Then promptly said meanwhile:

“A penny for your pleasant thoughts.”
And sought her eyes of blue.
“They really are not worth it, Jack,
Because—they’re all of you!”

Swarthmore’s Omar.

Oh, come and fill your Cup with Coffee black,
And cram those Rules and work those Problems back;
To-morrow!—why, To-morrow we may be Graded with those who’ve Flunked before, alack!

For many who, with lingering steps and slow,
Used Unprepared to Mathematics go,
Have taken Finals in Collection Hall,
And, one by one, dropped silently below.

Myself, when young, did dutifully frequent
Doctor and Prof., and heard great argument
Of Calculus and Conics; but it, alas!
In at one ear and out the other went.

Oh, Fears of Four and Hopes of even One!
One thought there is that certainly is Fun:
No matter if we did them well or not,
Papers once written are forever done.

Strange, is it not? that of the many who Before us passed that awful Final through,
Not one can tell us of those Questions there,
Which we, to get our Marks, must answer, too.

OH, Arthur is a gentle youth,
And loves dear Nature well;
The flowers fresh and fragrant cause
His heart with joy to swell;
It pleases him to wander through
The green woods far and wide,
But most he loves to linger near
The pleasant Waters'-side.

THE lassie who is wild o'er golf
Must always have a "plaidie,"
And by her side, at beck and call,
A handsome, stylish "laddie."

"Notes from Room D."

WHERE we tremble as we wait
Our inevitable fate,
And fan the paper that the ink may dry;
Then dodge down behind the back
Of some literary "quack,"
And thank our stars when Prof. has passed us by.

It is here we encounter that doleful variety of narrative that invariably introduces itself with, "It was a dark and stormy night; my good dog Tray yelped yearningly" (note the brilliant alliteration). There, too, we greet the rare jest with its "Laugh, and the world laughs with you" climax. Again we are moved to tears with "How, oh, how sad was the situation!" and "Weep not, O drooping willows!" But above them all, soaring on the never-tiring wings of the indulgent muse, mounts the ingenious fancy of the student-poet's brain. The malady takes several forms, but perhaps that with which we are most familiar begins with such refreshing lines as:

"The happy spring is here at last,
With leafy tree and tender grass!"

We might say that this form is one of the few disorders, a remedy for which even Dr. Munyon is lacking.

In Early Morn.

IT's a very common thing
For a poet great to sing
 Of the warbling of the early morning stars;
But no Swarthmore fellow hears
That sweet music of the spheres,
 For he's snoring at that time to beat the cars.

At Six P. M.

TIME to go up! But what want we to do
With Beefsteak tough and boiled Potatoes too?
 Let Doc. his Bugle flourish as he will
Or the Bell ring for Dinner—heed not you.

With me along the Strip of Ice that all
In moonlight lies, between the Bridge and Fall,
 Where name of Faculty and Dean's forgot,—
And Peace to those within the Dining-hall!

THERE once was a maiden quite wary,
Who was thought by her friends literary,
 For wherever she went
'Twas on Milton intent,—
This deceptive young maiden named M—y.

WE live in such a busy age
That seldom can we find
A person who has leisure
Whenever he's inclined.
Why, even Alice now has time
For nothing, so to speak,
Though once, no matter what she did,
She always had a Wreck.

To the Ivy.

DAINTY tendril on yon gray wall,
Whose stones are so cold and dead,
Dost thou ever feel the winter's wind
And the frost when thy leaves are shed?

Or does the warmth of happy spring
Creep again along thy stem,
And the joy and life of summer days
Come throbbing with freshness again?

'Tis surely true, for I see thee nod
As thou scalest the battlement,
And tenderly touch the turret's top
With a kiss as thy head is bent.

Like thee, O emblem of fortitude,
A-sway in the moaning blast,
We, too, oft smooth the way of life
With a pleasant thought of the past.

The Land that Waits for Me.

When the moon comes over the eastern trees,
When the long, black shadows fall,
When the cricket calls to his wandering mate
'Neath the ivy-covered wall,
Then I long for the cliff and the wind-swept hill,
And the land that waits for me.

There the brown hills sleep in the autumn wind,
And the hemlocks whisper low;
There the pines sing softly the long night through
To the river far below,
And the stream from the rocks sends an answering call
In the land that waits for me.

There the nodding fern greets the crimson dawn,
And the wild vine climbs the oak;
There the rock is cleft for the housing-place
Of strange, shy woodland folk,
And the hill-spring murmurs through lingering years
In the land that waits for me.

Then I look again through the misty past,
And the sunset's afterglow
Seems to waver along the friendly slopes,
And the shadows come and go
As they beckon me, beckon me back to my home
In the land that waits for me.

And the moon comes over the eastern trees,
And the long, black shadows fall,
And the cricket calls to his wandering mate
'Neath the ivy-covered wall,
And I long for the cliff and the wind-swept hill
And the land that waits for me.

To the Sowers.

This year from distant shore and foreign land

From Albion's lovely isle across the sea,
From tropic Indus, and from Germany,

As from Columbia's most learned band,
Great intellects have here with kindly hand

Sown seeds to ripen in futurity;
Into our country's strength and majesty,
Into its pillars, straight and tall and grand.

Perchance in stony places some seeds fell,

Or by the wayside, bare and lone and drear;
But some in fertile soil are rooted well,

To live and grow straight upward without fear;
And some day may the breezes, whispering low,
Apprise those sowers how their good seeds grow.

How Would You Like to See

Dick Peters look pleasant?
Meredith quit talking?
Bob Walker grow a little?
Conics and Calculus abolished?
Pud in a cap and gown?
A model dining-room?
Dean Bond quit worrying?
Less stiffness at the College receptions?
Mitchell serious?
All the students at Collection?
Smith at meeting?
Bill Barr?
Winifred Rogers flunk?
Smedley fussing?
A Junior Prom?
The reading-room quiet?
Signing-up discontinued?

FRESHMAN going on a spree
Meets the youths of 1903;
Freshie keeping still and mum
Takes a dip into the Crum;
Sophie meets P. Rex next day,
Has to tell about the fray;
Prexie makes a rigid rule,
"No more hazing in this school."

Basket Ball.

(À LA THE EAST WING.)

A WAITING, a throwing, a running, a thump,
A rushing, a pushing, a skipping, a jump,
A scrambling, a falling, a tearing of hair,
A pitching—and lo! the ball isn't there!

A passing, a grabbing, a snapping, a fall,
A seizing, a rolling, a scrapping, a squall,
A shoving, a snatching, a kicking, a roll,
A dashing, a bounding, a tossing—a goal!

A throwing, a guarding, a shoving, a fall,
A moaning, a groaning, a loosing the ball,
A calling, a kicking, an ankle that's lame,
A rushing, a whistling—the end of the game!

As Usual.

It came to pass, upon a time,
He went to church and made a rhyme.
The rhyme was poor, the meter worse,
The theme would make an angel curse.
He wrote and wrote—till he was done—
Then gave it to the HALCYON.

Stray Facts.

OUR Professors belong to a numerous band
Who never seem able to quite understand
That study's a pleasure
Reserved for one's leisure,
And only pursued when there's nothing on hand.

Greek, German, Geometry, all start with G's,
But who is enabled to end them with E's?
Though you really don't care
For a flunk here and there,
They interfere greatly with getting degrees.

We all know a fairy by means of whose skill
We are changed into Portias and Hamlets at will;
But to make love or die
With the Class standing by
Is, putting it mildly, a right bitter pill.

Miss Nowell is burdened with numberless cares
When the reading-room's thickly besprinkled with pairs,
For as soon as she looks
They are deep in their books,
And a sweet smile of innocence each reader wears.

Waiting.

SECOND FLOOR.

WHEN the twilight bell is ringing to the skaters on the Crum,
When Johnnie with the mail-box has climbed the asphaltum,
When the village lights are shining, though the stars
are very pale,
Then Susan J. is waiting in the alcove for the mail.

THIRD FLOOR.

WHEN the good East Wing is silent and study has begun;
When Social Hour's over, for all the girls save one;
When no one's by to see it, and the moon won't tell the tale,
Then Susan A. is waiting in the alcove for the male.

Ah, make the most of what we yet may spend,
Before we, too, must home to Father send,
Swamped in a sea of Dues and Unpaid Bills,
Sans Cash, sans Check, sans Credit, and—sans Friend!

You may talk of your London fog,
Or of others upon your list.
If you'd once strike this Swarthmore bog
You'd get lost and never be mist.

His Last Hazing.

"Now here they come again," soliloquized the Skeleton, and he rattled his dry hands together excitedly, "and I just won't stand it—Why, last year they hung me up on the dome, and goodness knows, that was shock enough for a lifetime! and now here they come again. I say, I just won't stand it! Oh, what are they trying to do? They can't get in here," and he clutched the frail door-casing desperately with his long, white fingers. There was a short, rasping sound—then something snapped. "Oh, now they've done it! Now they've done it, and—" A pair of strong arms encircled his tall, loose frame. He felt himself lifted and carried out across the echoing room.

"Open the window there, Jones," squeaked a voice from behind him, and the Skeleton shivered as a great gust of snow and wind came driving in. "Now, boost him up," came a voice from the ledge. "That's it! Head erect, shoulders back, chest out! Feet over the edge there! Why, it's a regular picnic for Bones! Just a little moonlight frolic, isn't it, old boy?" The window rattled down noisily. The boys did not hear the plaintive sob from the ledge.

"If we hadn't Bones, don't know what we would do," whispered Baker on the stairs, "and he's so easy to handle. Now there was that calf last year; well, that was different; he seemed so nervous and so anxious to be going home that—"

"Douce that glim, there, Jones, here comes Billie!"

Next morning there was consternation in the College. The skeleton from the Museum had been found broken and dismembered in the snow by the west wall.

* * * * *

In the snow along the ledge above were strange, faint tracks, resembling neither those of man nor any familiar thing, but such a trail as the wind might make with a swaying, bended bush.

THE kind of letter Father shuns
Doth read like this: "I'm out of funds.
Please do send a twenty back.
Love to all. Sincerely, Jack."

WE know a Professor named Guyer,
Who doctors the boiler-room fuyer,
Who writes odes to the "Clips,"
Instead of red lips,
And keeps growing huyer and huyer.

THERE is a young Junior named Davy,
With complexion and hair like a baby,
"Though mild as a lamb
He one day said "D - - n!"
When the waitress submerged him in gravy.

Epilogue.

The music ceases and the footlights die,
The air grows chill,—
Yet there floats upward through the drowsy dark
Some fragrance still
Of the sweet flowers that the maidens wore,
And echoes of their songs lilt past us o'er and o'er.

So, when our College days are past and dead
And we grow old,
May memory bring back the songs we sung,
The tales we told,
In those dear days of youth so glad and free,
Back in the morn of life under the greenwood tree.
